Meet Nichell Thompson: Your New Orleans Real Estate Consultant.

I am a full-time real estate agent with over 20 years of experience in selling residential and commercial real estate in the Greater New Orleans area. I was born in New Orleans and have always been a lover of all things New Orleans! I have been happily married to my husband for over 28 years and are the proud parents of one daughter who is currently attending LSU, Go Tigers!!

Why I'm Different

I am well known for my great customer service, consistent communication, and ensuring a positive experience for all parties in a transaction: buyers, sellers, and cooperating agents. I am a skilled negotiator with my client's best interest at heart. I believe strongly that it is not only my duty to represent my clients to the best of my ability, but also to educate and inform them of the process so that they may make the best decisions possible.

Why Choose Me

I am honest, hardworking, and extremely knowledgeable in the real estate market. This is not just my job, but it is my passion. I know what it takes to successfully close a transaction making the buying or selling positive and seamless!

Be Prepared and Ready to Strike

With the fastest market in history, homes are selling at record speed. When a home hits the market that you might be interested in, go see it! Don't wait! In a sellers market due to low inventory levels, buyers have to be more aggressive in order to be successful in their homeownership goals. The average number of homes with multiple offers in California is almost 8 out of 10 homes. If you plan on waiting for the open house, good luck.

Even with the best Real Estate Agent, buying a home in a sellers' market can take a lot of your time, so be prepared, be flexible, be ready to move quickly, and be decisive. Now, having said that, don't be too impulsive or too compromising. Urgency is key but don't let it rule your decision either. The right home will show up eventually. Buying a home, whether it's your first home, your forever home, or your retirement home, is a big decision and the last thing you should want is buyer's remorse.

Full price offers are common, and even a few homes are going over the asking price in a bidding war with motivated buyers. So just what is it that a buyer should do to succeed when they find a home you've fallen in love with and can't see yourself in any other home?

Show You Are A Serious Buyer

Showing sellers and their Agent that you are a serious buyer is imperative to success. No one wants to waste their time, including you. Seller's expect Agents to open their homes only to those who are qualified in advance to purchase a home. Plus, if you find that perfect home, you need to be ready to get an offer in, which you can't do without financing approvals. So, here are the first 5 steps to show you are serious:

Step 1.

Before you do anything, secure your financing. Deciding on a lender that you are confident in working with is also important. Meeting with two or three will help you decide who will be the best fit for now and years to come.

Step 2.

Gather all of needed documents your lender requests. Be quick to respond to any additional needs and understand they are working on your behalf.

Step 3.

Complete the loan application. You will now know how much home you can qualify for and determine what you are comfortable paying for your new home.

Show You Are A Serious Buyer

Step 4.
Once you have been preapproved, have your lender provide the pre-approval letter. This letter shows the seller that you have been vetted financially while giving you an idea of how much you can afford.

Step 5.
Keep your documents up to date and stored where you can get your hands on them on a moments notice. It's likely you will have to provide the bank statements and pay stubs again, when you are in contract.

Now that you have your financing, you should be able to shop with confidence, knowing what you can afford, what your budget is and you are prepared to make a strong offer when you find that home you love.

Making a Strong Offer

In a Seller's Market environment, buying the first home a buyer wants may be difficult! It may take a few offers to get accepted. It doesn't hurt to have a war chest of strategies to help your odds in getting your offer accepted.

Tip 1.

Don't low-ball the seller. Be prepared to pay fair market value. Low-balling may alienate the seller right off the bat. And it wastes everyone's time. Plus while you are messing around, chances are another offer is being accepted. Get serious.

Tip 2.

Be flexible with your timing. The more flexible you are with the timing of the seller's move, as to how quickly or slowly their needs are to move can give you a great advantage over other offers.

Tip 3.

Tug at the heart strings. Find common ground with the sellers, like are you both veterans? If there is a situation with multiple offers vying for the same property, write a personal letter to the sellers that shows why you love the house and that might help to set your offer apart.

Making a Strong Offer

An offer $10,000 over the asking price with $10,000 in contributions from the seller is a greater risk to a seller, as far as the home appraising, than an offer at asking price with no seller contributions.

Tip 4.

Increase Your Earnest Money deposit. A larger earnest money deposit may appeal to a seller. Ask your agent for advice. You might consider doubling or tripling that amount. You're going to pay it anyway at closing.

Tip 5.

Don't request favors of the sellers. Asking for additional appliances, furniture, fixtures, or repaint the front door could hurt your offer and get you put at the bottom of the pile.

Tip 6.

Limit the contingencies. Get a pre-inspection. Anything you can do to speed up the buying process and make it easier for the seller might improve your chances.

The Right Agent

Choosing a “buyers” Real Estate Agent is an absolute must in the seller’s market environment. The seller’s market is the most competitive and aggressive housing market to be in when trying to succeed at purchasing a home for you and your family. And it’s emotional. A good buyers agent should be able to accommodate your schedule to view homes, have offers ready to be delivered, and respond to you quickly. If your agent doesn’t show homes evenings or weekends, or has poor response times, they might not be the right agent in this market. It can cost a buyer the opportunity to buy their dream home.

A good buyer’s agent also needs to have the ability to advise you on the best offer strategy and then to be a strong negotiator on your behalf. A big part of a buyers success in a bidding war is the experience and skill of their Real Estate Agent.

If you love the house, chances are someone else might love it too. Your Agent will be a big resource when it comes to submitting an attractive offer. If you hired them for their skill and knowledge, taking their advice might be prudent.

Why Choose a Keller Williams Agent?

In our experience, a home isn't a dream home because of its room dimensions. It's about how you feel when you walk through the front door—the way you can instantly envision your life unfolding there.

This is about more than real estate. It's about your life and your dreams. It's important that the agent you choose to guide you through this journey is your trusted expert and advocate.

What's different about a Keller Williams agent?

Knowledge: Keller Williams agents stay ahead of trends, tools and topics in the real estate industry through their access to Keller Williams University. The comprehensive industry-leading training curriculum prepares our agents to serve you at the highest level.

Teamwork: Unlike other real estate companies, Keller Williams Realty was designed to reward agents for working together. At our core, we believe that we are all more successful if we strive towards a common goal, rather than our individual interests. And, that goal is to serve you, our client, at the highest level possible.

Reliability: Keller Williams Realty was founded on the principles of trust and honesty, emphasizing the importance of having the integrity to do the right thing and always putting your needs first. Our agents realize that their success is ultimately determined by the legacy we leave with each client we serve.

Speed: Leading-edge technology solutions accelerate our associates' efficiency and productivity.
